English 132-Short Story & Novel

This course is an introduction to reading, understanding, and analyzing long and short fiction from diverse voices. Students will acquire a broad understanding of the art of fiction by exploring the elements of fiction such as plot, character, narrative voice, structure, and pattern in order to understand how and what a text means. We will consider the relationship between form and content, structure, and meaning. We will also use class, race, gender, nationality, sexuality, and identity as categories of analysis.

Student participation is essential to the development of competency in analyzing these literacy works, thus students are expected to be prepared for class by completing the reading prior to class discussion, and further to participate in class orally. Reading is a must in this class!

CLASS PROCEDURES

1. Attendance is very necessary! If you cannot attend class for some reason, you are responsible for finding out from a classmate what you have missed, and what the assignment is for the next class meeting. Please do not call or email me to ask for assignments you’ve missed. You are expected to be prepared to participate fully in the class discussion on the day you return to class, and hand in any assignment that is due. Quizzes cannot be made up. After two unexcused absentees you will lose a point each time you are absent. THERE ARE NO EXCEPTIONS!

2. Please turn off and put away your cell phones during class.

3. Class Participation will be an important portion of your grade, not that it will be equivalent in value to all of the written exams. I will assume that each of you would have read the assignment, and I will, therefore, feel free to call on you. Each class period, you will bring to in writing (typed) two questions/comments to help prompt class discussion of the reading or one full paragraph must be on that day’s assignment. I will take up the questions from time to time.
4. To further prepare yourself for class discussion, mark what you read by underlining or highlighting passages, or by writing the page and paragraph number down so that you can easily refer to materials. Consider material that strikes you as important or interesting, or part of the text that you simply don’t understand. This is always time to raise questions!

HONOR CODE

Any work that you submit must be your own. In addition, any words, ideas, or data that you use from another source (individual, website, and published text) must be properly documented. It is your responsibility to learn the rules and conventions of citing sources in your academic work. If you have questions about academic citation, consult with me during office hours or raise your issue in class. Plagiarism and cheating are serious offenses. Clear cases will result in an F for the course and appropriate academic sanctions. Please see the WVU Undergraduate Catalog section on Academic Integrity/Dishonesty for a full explanations and procedures.

LEARNING ENVIRONMENT

WVU is committed to social justice. I support that commitment and will work to create a positive learning environment based on open communication, mutual respect, and nondiscrimination. I welcome suggestions for further such an environment. Our University does not discriminate on the basis of race, sex, age, disability, veteran’s status, religion, sexual orientation, color, or national origin. If you are an individual in a disability and anticipate needing any type of accommodation in order to participate in this class, please advise me, and make appropriate arrangements with Disability Services at 304-293-6700.
