English 102: Composition and Rhetoric

Introduction: I really and truly believe that English 102 is one of those higher education courses that can permanently make a difference in the way you think about things. Specifically, we're going to use argument and writing to talk about generational differences and the purpose of higher education. I think you'll find after a couple of weeks, you will be sucked into the discussion and have far more to contribute to that discussion than you might have at first thought possible. Like English 101, this class can help you build a foundation for success both as a student during your time at WVU and as a thoughtful and engaged citizen throughout the rest of your life. English 102 should help you develop your ability to write researched, persuasive texts, and to use reading and writing as tools for understanding complex arguments and the audiences for such arguments. We cover both logical methods and fallacies. English 102 is not a class with a specific content to be learned or the specialized kinds of writing that you will encounter in your major. Instead, you will learn a process for using writing and research to think about complex problems and you will work with various genres of writing. This course will ask you to think about writing as a skill that you can develop for many situations, whether in the workplace or in your private life, through practice, rather than a natural talent or a set of rules. As such, you will need to approach your work in this class like a form of training: you will have to set goals, practice regularly, and chart your progress. We will do much of this work in class, so it is imperative that you come prepared every day and ready to practice! For a full explanation of the goals of English 102, please see pages x-xii in Joining Academic Conversations.

Policies and Procedures: Please see Joining Academic Conversations for departmental policies and procedures for English 102.

Social Justice and Classroom Environment: WVU is committed to social justice. I agree with WVU's commitment to social justice and expect to maintain a positive learning environment based on open communication and mutual respect. If we all respect one another and appreciate our differences, then there are no right or wrong answers and we all learn more—that is the kind of class I want to be a part of. Don't be afraid to take a chance and ask "dumb" questions—I do all the time, as you will see. We will all listen and participate together; I view individual participation as inseparable from the overall class community—if one person goes unnoticed, all suffer. Sometimes the dialogue we will engage in about various subjects may be intense (at least, I hope it will be!), and this is the place to discuss differing opinions with a view toward intellectual growth. So enter the class every day without judgment, be open minded, listen, and learn. However, should you feel uncomfortable in the classroom as a result of my actions, or those of a classmate, let me know as soon as possible! I cannot fix what I don't know about. Disrespectful behavior during class constitutes grounds for dismissal for that day--any dismissal from class shall be considered an absence. Please note that if you are aggressive and/or threatening toward me or other students, I WILL take steps to have you removed from class. On a related note, texting in class is disrespectful to me and to your fellow classmates. If you disrupt class through frequent cell phone calls or texting, I will ask you to leave and you will receive an absence for that day. All in all, if you show up every day open-minded and willing to think in new and challenging directions, you will succeed.

Modifications for Disabilities: We all learn differently, and I will do my best to engage all learning styles. If you have some particular modification that you require to get the most out of this class, please let me know right away at the start of the semester. Also, please contact the WVU Office of Disability Services for any questions or requests at:

Attendance: This course involves you directly in writing, reading, researching, and responding. It is a class that encourages collaborative learning through small and large groups, formal and informal writing activities, and peer response and conference activities. Because the course depends on your active preparation for every class and your active involvement during every class meeting, regular and on time attendance and active participation are critical to your success in this class.

On a MWF schedule, each student is allowed up to three absences. The fourth absence from a M-W-F class will compromise your grade as much as one full letter. Each subsequent absence will result in the further loss of up to one letter grade. Thus, students who miss 6 or more MWF classes will fail the course. Please note: All absences (excused or unexcused) will count toward the total number, and this policy obtains from the moment you are registered in the course. You are responsible for making up any work you may miss by failing to attend class, even if the absence is necessitated by illness or personal emergency.

Responsibilities When Absent for Illness, Injury, or Personal Emergency. If you have a contagious illness (such as the flu), severe injury, or a critical personal problem, you must, of course, take care of yourself. You do, however, have an obligation to notify your instructor immediately (within 24 hours) and you must arrange to complete any missed work in a timely fashion. Your teacher will give you clear guidelines for the ways you can make up for absences and stay on track. This make-up work may include further short-writing, online work, telephone or email collaboration, conferencing or peer review, and so on.

If you fail to turn in make-up assignments in a timely manner (usually within a week of your return to class) or if the make-up assignments are of insufficient quality, your grade will be penalized.

Responsibilities When Absent for University Activities or Religious Observance. In the case of university activities and religious observance, you must notify the instructor, in writing and two weeks prior to the date missed. Your teacher will give you clear guidelines for the ways you can make up for absences and stay on track. This make-up work may include further short-writing, online work, telephone or email collaboration, conferencing or peer review, and so on.

If you fail to turn in make-up assignments in a timely manner (usually within a week of your return to class) or if the make-up assignments are of insufficient quality, your grade will be penalized.

Avoiding Extended Absences. Students anticipating an extended absence of more than three consecutive class meetings or a total of five or more total absences, should take the course in another semester. Multiple absences necessarily limit your academic success in this class. It is much better for you as a writer and as a student to take the course during a semester when your schedule allows you to be present to do your best work. As Woody Allen says, “Eighty percent of success is showing up.” While I love this quote, I don’t think it’s exactly true for college; if you come to class, conferences, and office hours, you won’t just succeed—you will thrive. Try it.

Office Hours: My office hours are MWF 11:30 – 12:20 or by appointment. Office hours provide us with an opportunity to talk one on one, and you may drop in during these times to talk about any questions or comments you have about your progress in the course. As we all have busy lives, it’s always a good idea to email me when you plan to visit ahead of time to make sure we’re on the same page. I’d be happy to answer questions you have via email as well, and you can expect that I will respond to you within 24 – 48 hours Monday through Friday.

Standard of Work: This is a college level course, and you are expected to be comfortable with the mechanics of writing. The EasyWriter offers guidelines and activities to help you with these mechanics. The Writing Center is another resource available to you—to help you to brush up on your understanding of basic skills, but also to support you in all aspects of the writing process. Graduate students use the center for help with their dissertations. My students who have used it rave about it. And the best part is that it’s free!

WVU Writing Center: Is there for you!

Grading Breakdown:

Final Portfolio	70%
Informal writing	20%
Participation	10%

Response and Evaluation: You will not receive grades on the Major Writing Assignments during the semester; the good thing is you have the opportunity to revise your work as many times as you want for the Final Portfolio, and I will always give you comments on your revisions as quickly as I can. You will also have Short Writes that are designed to help you build upon the concepts and topics you are working on for the major writing assignments. Most assignments will be submitted online, except the Final Portfolio, which you will submit as a folder with all of your Major Writing Assignments printed out. I suggest you get familiar quickly with MIX, eCampus, and the WVU Libraries databases; how well you know how to use these resources will be crucial to your success in this class. If you are having issues with any of these sites, make an appointment to visit me during office hours early in the semester—I can help you!

Major Writing Assignments: There will be four of these throughout the semester submitted on eCampus. All of the readings, class activities, and Short Writes are designed to help prepare you for these larger papers. In other words, these major papers and your revisions of them account for 70% of your final grade.

Short Writes: Depending on the prompt I give you, Short Writes can be anything from handwritten pages completed during class or typed at home and submitted on eCampus, anything from personal and reflective to collaborative and experimental. I will give you the prompt in class, and they are meant to help you engage the topics of the Major Writing Assignment you are working on at the time. Short Writes are marked on a scale of 1-4, with 1 being the highest. You will have EIGHT of these throughout the semester. KEEP ALL SHORT WRITES THROUGHOUT THE SEMESTER! You will be required to include them in your Final Portfolio. These count for 20% of your final grade

Participation: Participation is assessed based not only on attendance, but also on your good citizenship, your investment in class activities and discussion, and your ability to respect and work well with others. You will receive an “In-progress” midterm grade and commentary, which will describe your work. You are welcome to talk to me if you have questions about your progress in the class. Success in this class depends on meeting all the requirements, the quality of your written work, your willingness to try new perspectives, to revise and rethink, to take risks, and your commitment to working hard for 16 weeks. Participation accounts for 10% of your final grade.

Late Work: Assignments are due when they’re due. Late work delays the class schedule and isn’t fair to those who finished on time. If you have a genuine problem, talk to me before the deadline, and we might be able to work something out. Late work can and usually does affect your final grade.

Plagiarism: Plagiarism will result in immediate failure for the course. Check the Academic Integrity/Dishonesty section of the WVU Undergraduate Catalog for the complete discussion on plagiarism. We will discuss plagiarism in class and how to avoid it. You will be expected to sign a contract indicating you understand the various forms of plagiarism and agree not to do so during your semester in this class.
